We simply live better
when we are connected.

To our Shareholders, Customers, and Friends:

On behalf of all of us at North State Bank, I'm pleased to report that the health of our Company, as indicated by our financial results, is very strong. Total assets, loans, and deposits for North State Bancorp (the "Company") as of December 31, 2021, were $1.40 billion, $918.0 million, and $1.29 billion, respectively, compared to totals as of December 31, 2020, of $1.17 billion, $954.9 million, and $1.07 billion, representing year-over-year changes of 19%, -4%, and 20%, respectively.

It is worth noting that the decrease in loans is directly tied to the forgiveness of the U.S. Small Business Administration's Paycheck Protection Program (PPP) loans, which our bank originated in 2020 and 2021. As these loans were "forgiven," our loan balances decreased significantly from a peak amount of approximately $167 million.

All of us are deeply grateful, not only for these results, but for our history over the last 22 years. I have found that when we have gratitude, we appreciate the value of something more deeply and are less likely to take what we have for granted. That is certainly the case here.

North State Bank began approximately 22 years ago with a vision and a set of values and beliefs that are still shared by all of us. At the core is our purpose, which is to add value to the lives of others while treating everyone with dignity and respect. That has not and will not change.

Before I make additional comments about what drives our performance and other related matters, I first want to reference Warren Buffett's annual letter to the shareholders of Berkshire Hathaway Inc. Mr. Buffett's letters are always interesting, educational, and clear. One of the things that struck me in his most recent letter is the number of times he referenced his friendship with his long-time partner, Charlie Munger. Mr. Buffett shares that they began working together in 1942 at Mr. Buffett's grandfather's grocery store. Later, Charlie became a lawyer and Warren started selling securities. Some years later, they both discovered what they really loved to do—to be custodians of invested funds for people who trusted them with a long-term approach to improving their wealth.

Larry D. Barbour
President and CEO

It's noteworthy that in this shareholder newsletter, Mr. Buffett uses the words "Charlie and I" 12 times. Obviously, there's a deep friendship here, which confirms for me that friendship and business can coexist in a healthy way. Mr. Buffett and Mr. Munger have proven that. Friendship is something we deeply believe in at North State Bank.

This "partnership" has worked well and has added value to the lives of so many people, not only financially, but in many other ways. In his letter, Mr. Buffett points out that the annual compounded gain from an investment in Berkshire Hathaway is 20.1%, dating back to 1965, over 56 years ago, for an overall gain of 3,641,613%. Wow!!

Why has Berkshire Hathaway been able to steadily and consistently improve the lives of so many people? And how is North State Bank managing to do the same?

Obviously, such results don't just happen but are the outcome of well-prepared intentions.

In line with that, banking is a very “human” business. Recently, I learned the CEO of Meta and his top officers are leaving the company headquarters in Silicon Valley to relocate in places around the world, including New York, Israel, Madrid, and Hawaii. The company said through a spokesman that “we believe that how people work is far more important than where they work.” However, Mr. Bill George, former CEO of Medtronic, Inc., and a senior fellow at Harvard Business School, tells us “Your people want to see you. They want to know you're there. Yes, you can use Zoom or Microsoft Teams or something to stay in contact, but there's a lot to be said for presence.”

There is much to be said for connection between people. I like what Dr. Brené Brown says about connection, which she defines as the “energy that exists between people when they feel seen, heard, and valued; when they can give and receive without judgement; and when they derive sustenance and strength from their relationship.” This clearly supports the truth that we are wired for connection. It is in our biology. From the time we are born, we need connection to thrive emotionally, physically, spiritually, and intellectually. This is not a hunch or some feeling. It's hard science—neuroscience to be exact. So, relationships shape our biology, as well as our experiences.

If we want to live healthier, productive, fulfilled, and fruitful lives, we must satisfy this innate need for connection, because the consequences of disconnection are dangerous.

Technology today has become a kind of “imposter” for connection, making us believe we are connected when we're really not – at least not in the ways we need to be. Overreliance on technology leads to the “myth” of self-sufficiency. We simply cannot go alone. In fact, it's been said that “if you want to go fast, go alone. If you want to go far, go with others.”

We seem to have so much data and information available, we often stop there. As Nobel Prize-winning economist Herbert Simon said over 40 years ago, “Information consumes the attention of its recipients. Hence a wealth of information creates a poverty of attention.” We need to focus more on the people in our lives, not so much on the data.

In reference to the importance of connection and well-being, study and research has shown that people who work in close physical proximity to one another perform about 15% better than those who are separated from their colleagues. In fact, the farther apart people were, the more isolated and unhappy they felt. The bottom line is that when you're physically close to other people, you're better able to learn from one another and be more productive. In fact, seeing is learning. Leadership, growth, and development are very visual. We must stay close to each other.

Certainly, the pandemic contributed to social distancing and isolation. Although we must respect the strength of COVID and other illnesses, we cannot compromise our need to connect with other humans. We simply live better when we are connected.

In another study on social networks and connection, researchers used a formula in which the likelihood of connection between any two people decreases with the square of the distance between them. In other words, if people become twice as far apart, they become four times less likely to form a connection or a bond. Wow! So texting, videoconferencing, teleconferencing, and other means of communicating are simply unable to produce the connection for which we are wired.

One other interesting note along these lines is that the climate and environment of a company is critical. If people are separated, it is impossible to improve the climate. Climate is not some meteorological term. It's an organization's working environment and the flexibility that frees employees to be innovative and unencumbered by red tape and bureaucracy. It creates a sense of responsibility to an organization with levels of standards that people accept and follow. In turn, people have clarity about the mission, values, and purpose of the organization and they develop a strong commitment to a common purpose. This is certainly true at North State Bank. I regularly see it firsthand through our people.

In fact, research also shows that one third of any company's results are attributed to climate or the environment in which the people work. That means, if you have a good environment, it's very likely that one third of your results came from a deeper level of commitment and better performance from your people.

So, I believe that the future will continue to be bright as we improve our levels of self-awareness and become more emotionally intelligent, as we add value to the lives of others, and as we treat them with the dignity and respect they deserve.

As much as I am still tempted to refer to the financial metrics and "leave it there," I cannot do that. This is a very human business and humans are becoming underrated which is wrong and unwise. We need to get “back to human.” I don’t know how to say it more succinctly. I’ve said it before and now again. Technology is an “enabler” which should only help us spend more time “being human.”

I’ll conclude my remarks with a quote from Mr. Warren Buffett. I read this quote to my grandchildren recently, and at a young age, they were struck by Mr. Buffett’s comments. He says: “Basically, when you get to be my age, you’ll really measure your success in life by how many people you want to love you actually do love you. I know people who have a lot of money, and they get testimonial dinners, and they get hospital wings named after them. But the truth is that nobody in the world loves them. If you get to my age in life and nobody thinks well of you, I don’t care how big your bank account is, your life is a disaster.”

“That’s the ultimate test of how you have lived your life. The trouble with love is that you can’t buy it. You can buy testimonial dinners. You can buy pamphlets that say how wonderful you are. But the only way to get love is to be lovable. It’s very irritating if you have a lot of money.”

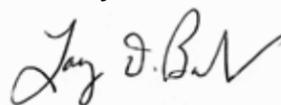

“You’d like to think you could write a check: I’ll buy a million dollars’ worth of love. But it doesn’t work that way. The more you give love away, the more you get.”

Looking back on what our people have done helps us to look forward. Someone once said that we are known by the company we keep. I have also learned that a company is known by the people it keeps.

I’m so deeply thankful for our people and their passion for helping others. A great question in life is, “Am I doing what I love, and am I loving what I do?” “Yes” is the answer our people give every day as they keep adding value to the people we serve.

We thank God for your support, your interest in our Company, your investment in this Company and, most of all, the trust you’ve placed in us through these years.

Independent Auditors' Report

To the Shareholders and the Board of Directors
North State Bancorp
Raleigh, North Carolina

Opinion

The accompanying condensed consolidated financial statements, which comprise the condensed consolidated balance sheets as of December 31, 2021 and 2020, and the related condensed consolidated statements of operations for each of the years then ended, are derived from the audited consolidated financial statements of North State Bancorp as of December 31, 2021 and 2020 and for each of the years then ended. We expressed an unmodified audit opinion on those audited consolidated financial statements in our report dated March 23, 2022.

In our opinion, the condensed consolidated financial statements referred to above of North State Bancorp as of December 31, 2021 and 2020 and for each of the years then ended are consistent, in all material respects, with the audited consolidated financial statements from which they have been derived.

Condensed Consolidated Statements

The condensed consolidated financial statements do not contain all the disclosures required by accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America. Reading the condensed consolidated financial statements and this auditor's report on the statements referred to above, therefore, is not a substitute for reading the audited consolidated financial statements of North State Bancorp and the auditors' report on them.

Management's Responsibility for the Condensed Consolidated Financial Statements

Management is responsible for the preparation of the condensed consolidated financial statements in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America.

Auditors' Responsibility

Our responsibility is to express an opinion about whether the condensed consolidated financial statements are consistent, in all material respects, with the audited consolidated financial statements based on our procedures, which were conducted in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America. The procedures consisted principally of comparing the condensed consolidated financial statements with the related information in the audited consolidated financial statements from which the condensed consolidated financial statements have been derived, and evaluating whether the condensed consolidated financial statements are prepared in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America.
